

Water Saver

Abstract

An apparatus for conserving water in a household or commercial plumbing installation. Water temperature is monitored preceding the delivery point (e.g. faucet), and water is automatically diverted and locally stored until it reaches a predetermined desired temperature. The stored water is incrementally returned to the delivery point at times when temperature is of no concern.